Augusta Genealogical Society: An Information Session

After many years, the Augusta Genealogical Society left their home on the corner of Tenth and Broad, and moved to a new location on Claussen Road. The Georgia Room of the Augusta Public Library has invited representatives from AGS to present a program on all the Society has to offer in terms of membership, resources, programs, and expert guidance for those researching their family history. If you are interested in beginning your family history search, or have been researching your family for years, please take advantage of this special presentation, and learn what the Augusta Genealogical Society is all about. This program is free and open to the public.

Please register by calling the Georgia Heritage Room at 706-826-1511.

Georgia Libraries for Accessible Statewide Services (GLASS) and the Talking Book program will remain available to all Georgia patrons with vision, physical or reading/learning disabilities who qualify for this program. If you are currently enrolled in the Talking Book program, your service will continue without disruption. For persons who wish to enroll for the first time, please fill out the GLASS Individual application. These are available on the GLASS website <https://georgialibraries.org/glass/> or through your local public library. Please contact your local public library if you need help with the application. For other questions and concerns, from reader's advisory, to help with BARD or Bookshare accounts, please call the GLASS Statewide office at 1-800-248-6701.

GEORGIA HERITAGE ROOM PROGRAMS

Tuesday, November 19th @ 10:30 am

Using the Georgia Historic Newspaper Website 3rd Floor Computer Lab

Often overlooked by researchers, newspapers can offer valuable insight into your ancestors' lives. Through the efforts of the Digital Library of Georgia, many historic newspapers from around the state are now available online. This class teaches participants how to access and search the new database through GALILEO, the Library's online portal. Space is limited, so please call 706-826-1511 to register.

Saturday, December 14th at 3 pm

Cooking up History: Using cookbooks to trace your family and recipe swap

Many of us would never think to use cookbooks and recipes handed down to us from our mothers, aunts, and grandmothers as a way to learn more about our female ancestors, but they certainly are! When researching the women in our families sometimes we have to find creative ways of learning more about them, as many of the county, state, and federal records available for genealogical research tell us very little about them personally. In many cases cookbooks and recipes created by the women in our families are highly individual and distinctive, a record of their lives within the domestic sphere. While not always the case, cookbooks in general are particular to women, as women are traditionally and historically the keepers of hearth and home. Join us on Saturday, December 14th, 2019 at 3pm in the Georgia Heritage Room to learn how you can use your family's favorite cookbooks and recipes to tell their stories. Be sure to bring copies of a favorite recipe from your family to share with the group!

Cooking up History: An Exhibit of Family and Local Community Cookbooks

Back by popular demand! Last year's exhibit was so successful that we are bringing it back in time for the holiday season. The exhibit will be on display in the Georgia Heritage Room beginning the last week of October and run through the end of the year. Come and explore the collection and learn how family recipes can tell the story of your family!

Tuesday, October 22nd @ 10:30 am

Augusta Genealogical Society: An Information Session

Library Auditorium Room B

After many years, the Augusta Genealogical Society left their home on the corner of Tenth and Broad, and moved to their new location on Claussen Road. The Georgia Room has invited representatives from AGS to present a program for our genealogy patrons on all the Society has to offer as far as membership, resources, programs, and expert guidance for those researching family history. If you are interested in beginning your family history search, or have been researching your family for years, please take advantage of this special presentation, and learn all about what the Augusta Genealogical Society has to offer. Please register by calling the Georgia Heritage Room at 706-826-1511.
