Elizabeth Willis DeHuff was born in Augusta, Georgia and grew up in Beech Island South Carolina. She graduated from Tubman High School and Lucy Cobb College in Atlanta, Georgia. Having met her husband John DeHuff in the Philippines, she went with him to Santa Fe New Mexico where she developed a great interest in Native American culture and started her writing career with children's plays, stories and magazine articles. Living later in Augusta, she served as President of the Augusta Authors club. While Hoppity Bunny's Hop is an example of her writing for children, she also wrote a number of genealogical works.
